

Information Regarding the Coronavirus COVID-19

Hello,

Just when life and business were complicated enough here comes a challenge and threat the likes of which few if any of us have ever experienced. I hope the coronavirus situation has been overhyped but I am certainly in no position to judge. As it is, we must take our lead from those best trained to interpret and advise during such times. That leaves out the media and politicians - whom I have heard more than one doctor suggest should “just shut up”.

But we do need as much information and advice as we can gather from credible sources. Today, at an Indiana Bowling Proprietors Association meeting this issue was the issue. Representatives from the national Bowling Proprietors Association of America (BPAA) spoke to this subject and offered some valuable resources for business owners and managers to access to expand their understanding of what this is and what we can do to work our way through this.

Below is a link to a section of the BPAA’s site that contains further links to many valuable, credible sources of information. I strongly suggest you take a look – this is a quality response from the BPAA staff. This information is valuable to both centers and pro shops.

We take no official stance on what is best for our customers, but this is a great resource for you to find information and tools to help during this time. It is the direct link to the BPAA site, and the entire front page is devoted to this issue:

Also, there is a lot of misinformation out there. One highly respected source for following the true path of the disease is presented by the Center for Systems Science and Engineering (CSSE). You may find this interesting:

For our part, we shall remain open, at least as long as no regional or national emergency measures shut us down. Also:

1. Our employees are free to stay home if they do not feel safe coming to work.
2. If our employees have a fever and chest congestion they are required to stay home – if they come to work, they will be sent home.

You have our best wishes. If there is anything at all you feel we can do to help, please let us know.

Sincerely,

Tony Todd and the staff at Little River Lanes
